

My decision

I would like to apply for the Software Developer position because I am passionate about technology and computer science. I believe this job is a good fit for me, as I enjoy solving problems and learning new digital skills.

The most important skills for this position are teamwork, communication, and programming knowledge. I consider myself a good candidate, although I have some weaknesses. I am responsible (which I enjoy), and I am disorganized, although when I want to be, I am very detail-oriented and meticulous, especially if I am motivated in this role (if I enjoy it). I am quite solitary and prefer to do things on my own because I don't like asking for help. However, I am not bad at teamwork, nor do I dislike it. Since I am my own leader, I am not very good at leading a work group, so I let others give me instructions. Despite all this, I follow instructions to the letter and believe I do a decent job (again, if I am motivated, I work hard).

In my opinion, this job will allow me to gain valuable experience that I can use whenever I want or need. However, the Graphic Designer position is also interesting to me, as it's creative and quite useful.
